THE Koken STORY

Mr. Soichiro Yamashita
Founder, Ko-ken Tool Company

In 1907, at the age of 18, Mr. Soichiro Yamashita left his family in Japan and moved to the U.S.A. to follow the American dream. He finally got his break when he was given a job interview by Mr. Henry Ford himself. Mr. Ford was so impressed, he hired Soichiro to work for Ford Motor Co., becoming the first foreigner to work there. After a long career with Ford USA, and later with General Motors Japan, Mr. Yamashita returned to his home town of Daito SHIZUOKA at the end of 1945. In 1946, he founded Ko-ken Tool Co. Ltd.

Ko-ken started exporting sockets and accessories in 1965. Ko-ken was one of the first Japanese manufacturers to adopt rigid quality control processes and remains committed to these. Impressively, New Zealand was the first export market for Ko-ken.

Today Ko-ken is still owned and operated by the Yamashita family. The company is recognised as one of the leaders in the international tool production industry, exports products around the world and is renowned for the quality of every product to carry the Ko-ken name. Made for Professionals, there is no equal.
